

MORGAN LOOKS FOR A PLACE IN ANANIAS CLUB

Financier Says He Is Eligible
Since Yale Has Made Him
Doctor of Laws.

Dr. J. Pierpont Morgan carried his new university honors lightly when he boarded La Provence, of the French line, and sailed today for Havre. The famous financier was in a singularly sprightly mood for him and turned a sunny smile on the ship news reporters that almost struck them dumb with amazement.

He wore a suit of light gray stuff and swung a cane lightly between thumb and forefinger as he stepped up the gangplank in the wake of James Holliman, the banker's son, "Jack" Morgan, his daughter, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, and Mrs. William Pierpont Hamilton and their husbands. While his relatives and friends passed on down the deck Mr. Morgan turned and faced the reporters with that good-humored smile that made them search their memories vainly for the like of it on the usually to them stern and forbidding grimaces of the Morgan countenance.

Gets in Ananias Club.

"When you came in on the Mauretania last week, Dr. Morgan," ventured

GOWN AS AN LL.D.

one reporter, "you promised to give us some sort of an interview." "No, no," said Mr. Morgan now. "That sounds funny, doesn't it? But I am a doctor of laws, it seems, so not a real doctor. I suppose since they made me a lawyer it won't be long before they put me in the Ananias Club. That seems to be the place where all the lawyers get to."

Asked if he had any statement to make regarding the death of ex-President Cleveland, the banker turned very serious and said:

"No, no. Don't ask me to speak off hand on such a subject as that. Mr.

Cleveland's death was a great shock to me, as it was to the Nation. Please do not ask me to speak about it."

"Have you anything to say on the financial and business outlook?" was asked.

"I expect a very decided improvement. You can say that I am very optimistic."

"Then you expect there will be much better times this fall?"

"I will not say that. I will not predict, but you may say I spoke optimistically."

To Return in August.

Mr. Morgan said that he expected to return in August. He will spend July in London and expects to get a good rest. Having imparted this information, he smiled again and walked quickly down the deck to his friends. It is the banker's first voyage on a French liner, and his choice of La Provence was made on the recommendation of Miss Anna Morgan, his daughter, who sailed on it several weeks ago.

For many years the financier couldn't be persuaded to sail on any but White Star liners. He occupied the cabin de luxe and will take all his meals in the private dining-room of the suite.

As the French liner drew out from her berth the banker stood for some time at the rail waving his cane at his relatives and friends on the pier.

BOMB BURSTS IN CHURCH DURING MASS.

Internal Machine Placed Behind
Pulpit Is Second Exploded in Turin Cathedral.

TURIN, June 25.—Two outrages have been perpetrated in churches of this city in the last few days and much excitement has resulted. Fortunately no lives were lost, nor has any one been injured.

A small bomb exploded yesterday behind the pulpit of the Cathedral of San Giovanni while mass was being celebrated, and the congregation was thrown into a state of panic. Last week there was a bomb explosion in the Church of La Consolata.

AIRSHIP FLIES FAST.

HAMMONDSPORT, N. Y., June 25.—The aeroplane June Bug today made a successful flight, going 2,175 feet in forty-one seconds. This is twice the distance heretofore made by the machine. It was kept about forty-five feet above the ground.

A heavy wind blew during the trial, the airship going with the wind. The descent was made without accident.
